Today I want to tell you about a 12 year-old Congolese boy named Iragi. When we met Iragi he hadn't eaten for days and was literally starving to death. He had the body of a five-year-old and was in serious danger of organ failure.

Thankfully our friend, Dr. Alain, rushed Iragi to Lwiro Hospital where he was immediately admitted to CFF's malnutrition program where Iragi received critical medical and nutritional treatment free of charge.

But this is only the beginning of Iragi's journey back to health. A child that has been on the brink of starvation needs specialized feeding every day for many months before his young body can regain strength and normal organ function.

Fortunately for Iragi, Children's Food Fund was there to pay for his treatment – but sadly, there are so many malnourished children just like Iragi who urgently need our help.
